(Washington, D.C.- November 3, 2022) Acacia Grace has been through it all. She pours her heart out on a new sunshine dripped neo-soul/R&B track, “I’m Not Meant To Break,” which she wrote effortlessly after a traumatic experience. Trials and tribulations are mirrored in the relationship between the chord progressions, bassline, guitars, string arrangements and background vocals. While the lyrics tell a real story, we are pulled along on our listening journey seamlessly by the production and the overall “sound” she’s developed over a long career. Acacia denotes her personal mantras and reminders that she is more than meets the eye, and will do what it takes to get through this challenging time.

“I like to combine together new school and old school vibes,” she says. It’s reminiscent of something Mary J. or Jill Scott would put forward on a record. And she swims in this lane perfectly.

“This song is a reminder that you can get through anything with perseverance. Just think about what and who you have in your life that can make things better. This too shall pass. it will get better, you are strong and resilient,” she says.

Acacia Grace is greatly inspired by other strong feminine voices such as Jill Scott, Laylah Hathaway, Leelah James, and Maysa to name a few. They align because of their collective vulnerability and precision within music. It’s a song for real women and real people. And it’s no question that Acacia’s sound can stand next to any of these greats with a level of self-awareness and respect. For listeners of Neo-Soul, Classic R&B, 90’s R&B, Pop/R&B, Top 40, Alt. R&B, Motown, Soul, R&B and all sub genres.

ABOUT ACACIA GRACE

Hailing from Washington, D.C., Acacia Grace was always inspired by the stirring power of music. The contemporary soul singer/songwriter’s musical voyage began early on, and the artist was a part of her school choirs as well as other school produced performances.

Penning down moving and poetic lyricism since she was young, Acacia Grace had significant classical music training. She graduated from Suitland Senior High School in Maryland and went on to complete a Bachelor’s and Master’s in criminal justice, before rediscovering her passion for music.

Acacia Grace founded a three-piece band with Korie Lewis and Isai Galvez in Orange County, Calif. She is currently involved in solo pursuits and released her debut EP titled, ‘Vulnerable’ in September 2021. On this project, she presented a sensational blend of heartfelt Soul, Jazz, and R&B music.

Acacia Grace’s newest single, “I’m Not Meant To Break”, follows up on her previous release and marks another stunning collaboration with UK-based producer Epithet Music. The new track is a soul-stirring testament to overcoming life’s struggles and holding onto what holds meaning for oneself. It adds onto her heartfelt and immersive musical discography. Apart from music, Acacia Grace is also a strong advocate and supporter of LupusLA. The artist currently splits her time between Southern California and the D.C area.
